

Air Quality Compliance Assistance in Spokane County

Background

The Spokane Regional Clean Air Agency (Spokane Clean Air) is the primary agency responsible for regulating air pollution from stationary sources in Spokane County. Spokane Clean Air enforces regulations on open burning, pollution released from industrial and commercial sources, woodstoves, asbestos removal and dust. The agency registers and inspects more than 625 commercial and industrial facilities located throughout the incorporated and unincorporated areas of Spokane County.

In the last twenty years, businesses and industries have reduced air pollution by using improved control technology, thereby contributing to the area's significant air quality improvements. The Spokane area has been in compliance with national, clean air standards since 1997 and in 2005, the "nonattainment" status was officially changed to "attainment" by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Spokane Clean Air's regulations, policies and programs are designed to continue forward on this path in order to attain and maintain air quality standards today and for future generations.

Compliance Assistance Program (CAP)

If you are in business, chances are you deal with many public agencies. Spokane Clean Air's Compliance Assistance Program (CAP) is designed to promote understanding of air quality regulations that pertain to business in order to increase compliance and reduce air contaminants.

Under CAP, a series of information sheets, newsletters, and resource guides has been developed to help businesses prevent and control air pollution. In addition, Spokane Clean Air staff is available to provide businesses with one-on-one technical assistance. The publications and technical assistance also help businesses access additional information on pollution prevention techniques and products

Resources Available

A variety of free publications is available through the Compliance Assistance Program, and many include self-inspection checklists. On the back is an order form for CAP publications currently available. In addition, some of these publications and other compliance information is available at www.spokanecleanair.org.

A complete copy of Spokane Regional Clean Air Agency Regulations may be purchased for $10 or downloaded from www.spokanecleanair.org.
